Rational - producer of ovens for the catering industry. Rational's ovens combine the traditional method of cooking by heat with steam, producing faster and better results, as well as a quick pay-back through savings in space, time, energy and reduced shrinkage of cooked food. The combination steamer segment accounts for only 14% of the global installed base of ovens and is growing fast. Rational is the clear global leader with a 43% market share, five times that of its nearest competitor. This gives it excellent economies of scale resulting in a significant technological lead. The competitive lead is extended by a strategy of pricing the products competitively. The excellent product and production strategy are complemented by a recently implemented marketing strategy. Already boasting a 19% EBIT margin, a return on net operating assets above 60% and a high level of free cash generation, we expect Rational to be capable of at least 20% low-risk earnings growth until 2002. The main reason for the flotation of this excellent company was not a need for capital, but to incentivise the management with share options. The main reason for its underpricing (up 70% after 2 months) was that the company has the misfortune of belonging to the "old economy". Still good value on 15 times estimated 2002 earnings.

Portfolio Activity

As at 31 March the Fund was 78.2% invested in 64 shares. March was a busy month. We sold completely our holdings in Cybertron, Mikron, Søndagsavisen, Redstone, ParaRede, Comptel and Aldata - all with good profits. We realised some gains in UCA and Zapf. Important new purchases were Sartorius, a cheap German industrial, BKN International, a European cartoon producer, Bellway, a UK housebuilder, Oasis, a UK women's clothing retailer, Dinamia, a Spanish venture capital company and Think Tools, a fast growing and profitable Swiss developer of knowledge management software. We added to our positions in ACG, Beru and Macro 4. The net effect of all these changes has been to reduce the price - earnings ratio of the portfolio.

Outlook

With no shortage of good ideas at attractive valuations we believe that the outlook for the Fund is promising.
